

DEVELOPING AN ONLINE COURSE CERTIFICATION

The Developing an Online Course Certification is required for those planning to develop a Standard or Solo course for SPC.

Applying the QM Rubric (APPQMR)

The APPQMR course introduces participants to the Quality Matters Rubric and the process of using that rubric to review online courses. The course is online and facilitated and requires 8-10 hours of work during each of the two weeks. Regardless of whether the course is QM- or SPC-facilitated, it is the same exact content, due dates, and assessments. Note that missing a due date in this course will cause you to be dropped from the course. So please make sure you have sufficient time to complete the course before you commit to registration. Once the course begins, you are committed.

Audience: This course is intended for anyone currently developing a Standard course for SPC or intending to revise their solo-developed course to become Quality Matters certified.

Developing an Online Course (DOC)

This course provides faculty with the knowledge and skills to develop a high-quality online course based upon existing approved course objectives. It also introduces Standard Course developing facilitators and solo developing faculty to the expectations for course development. This course consists of six modules and requires 15-20 hours to complete over a two-week period.

Audience: This course is intended for anyone currently developing a Standard Course for SPC or intending to update their own course to become Quality Matters certified.

Prerequisite: Applying the QM Rubric
